The Government of Mali submits this Early Warning to ICANN regarding the proposal to create the Top Level Domain (TLD) .HEALTH, by dotHealth Limited. This application is seen as sensitive and problematic due to the need to ensure that the TLD is operated with consumer protection and the public interest in mind.

Reason/Rationale for the Warning – This will be posted publicly:

GAC Member(s) to indicate the reason and rationale for the Early Warning being filed.

Health consumers in every country are considered as deserving special protection related to information, products and services that can directly affect their health. National policies for consumer protection are more difficult to enforce online, although they are arguably more important due to the global nature of online commerce. For example, today on unrestricted TLDs there is a global online market for health-related products sold without proper controls (such as counterfeit and tainted products) or regard for laws and regulations (such as sale of medications without prescription). Many developing countries lack the ability to investigate and stop fraud and misuse, and there is a growing concern that an unrestricted health TLD will bypass regulatory controls. A TLD for health that does not have adequate quality assurance mechanisms in place is likely to damage trust in the online health marketplace. This can harm legitimate online services and thereby limit competition and innovation. Such a situation is not in the public interest and is something no country can afford.

In this context, measures to protect consumers are not well enough demonstrated in this application, raising concerns about the ability of the applicant to protect consumers and thereby operate the TLD in the public interest. Moreover, the Government of Mali considers that the TLD has global implications and should therefore be operated in the interests of the global health community, which should have input into its policies.

We also refer to the requests from the World Health Organization, NGOs and others, who wrote to ICANN and the GAC to delay the attribution of the string to allow for consultation with the global health community on operating the TLD in the public interest. The Government of Mali also supports this request.
